From the Desk of Cultural Inspector Flerbin Hoogerblatz:

Attached find our report on the television of the Earth-people. We're not sure what role the things that the natives call "commercials" play, but we're pretty sure they're integral to the shows somehow. Anyway, the Earth television shows should be a good way to entertain our people without relying on horrendous poetry, but I'm not sure what order to show them in...

Earth Broadcast Schedule:

2:05 Four women living in New York City go through various romantic twists and turns while cleaning windows and other hard surfaces.

11:05 Gordon Ramsay eliminates contestants until the lucky winner gets to run a multinational oil company.

12:03 A medical drama that follows the lives of surgical interns as they develop their careers and eat a lot of potato chips.

5:17 Professional dancers are paired with a diverse selection of popular candy bars to see which team can perform the best.

6:09 Laundry detergent in poor condition is restored and blinged out.

9:04 A hedonistic bachelor lives with his divorced brother and his brother's son at the headquarters of an internet corporation known for their search engine.

1:07 A dysfunctional cartoon family which includes a talking dog drinks a lot of vodka.

4:08 Powdered fruit drinks are consumed by crude nerd stereotypes.

3:03 A man tells his kids the story of how he first came to know, fall in love with, and marry a major chemical corporation.

8:01 An outlaw onion-based-snack club traffics guns and drugs.

10:10 A struggling high school teacher gets mad and turns to selling trash bags to support his family.

7:01 A crime fighter is assisted by a high-tech, intelligent car which dispenses lemon-lime soda and helps him fight crime.
